

CITING SOURCES

RAMAZ
ישיבת רמז

THE RABBI JOSEPH H. LOOKSTEIN UPPER SCHOOL OF RAMAZ
at the Morris and Ida Newman Educational Center
60 East 78th Street, New York, NY 10021

2004-2005

תשס"ה

Ira M. Miller
Dean

September 2004

Dear Students:

The first edition of Citing Sources, published seven years ago, was warmly received. Both students and faculty expressed appreciation for the booklet as a convenient and clear guide to their research and writing. We even received inquiries from teachers and administrators of other institutions—educators who had heard of this guide and who were interested in obtaining a copy.

Once the brochure was distributed, though, we immediately recognized the need for a second edition. We had not treated the uses of Jewish sources or of electronic media; we had not illustrated the conventions for citing drama. In addition, we wanted to provide more precise illustrations of different examples of quotations. Each of you, undoubtedly, has submitted a paper and, then, discovered several points that could have improved—refined.

Here is the fifth edition. As I wrote in the introduction to the first edition, this guide represents, in its own modest way, our respect for our educational mission, for the process of scholarship, and for the creativity that sparks our thinking and writing. As you continue to refer to Citing Sources, please note any questions that may arise, as well as suggestions for future editions. The members of the English department are eager to maintain this guide and to make certain that it responds to students' and teachers' needs.

In the meantime, as we wait for the next edition, special thanks go to my English department colleagues whose patience and dedication have been inspiring. Also, my personal thanks to Mrs. Rosalie Weinstein whose commitment and care in producing the first edition of this booklet have continued to propel this project forward.

Sincerely,

Ira M. Miller

TABLE OF CONTENTS

A Message from Rabbi Haskel Lookstein	1
Get the Facts	3
Do Not Document Everything	4
Document Almost Everything	5
Parenthetical Documentation	6
Incorporating Quotations	8
Methods of Incorporating Quotations into Your Paper	8
Preparing the Final Draft	20
Preparing a List of Works Cited Page	23
Works Cited	24
Sample Pages of a Research Paper in MLA Style	26

A MESSAGE FROM RABBI HASKEL LOOKSTEIN

One of the primary goals of a Ramaz education is to develop menschlichkeit in our students. In fact, menschly behavior— behavior defined as honorable, moral, refined, and civil— really precedes purely religious behavior, in accordance with the statement of our sages that derekh erez kadma l'torah, or, as I like to translate it, menschliness precedes Godliness.

Among the many manifestations of honorable conduct is scrupulous honesty in one's spoken and written words and in one's general behavior. One of the difficult pitfalls in the path of honesty is plagiarism, presenting someone else's work as one's own. It is a serious, moral, religious offense according to Judaism. It misleads the recipient of the work, and, in the long run, it damages the presenter as well.

Ramaz students should be most scrupulous in this matter. Not only is the negative effect of plagiarism unfortunate, but, our sages tell us, there is a blessed positive side of always quoting the source of one's work if it is not one's own. Referring to Esther's telling the King about the plot to kill him and presenting it in the name of Mordechai, the Talmud says, "Whoever identifies the source of a statement brings redemption to the world."

INTRODUCTION

As you can see from the preceding statement by Rabbi Haskel Lookstein, Ramaz is committed to academic integrity. For students, this means that all work submitted for evaluation is expected to be their work alone. This includes, but is not limited to, homework, tests, term papers, essays, lab reports and oral reports.

It is understood that sometimes it is necessary, even desirable, to seek help or advice from an outside source or to use material from an outside source; however, it is also understood that the source must be appropriately acknowledged. Citing (documenting) your sources lets you give credit to the author whose original work you have used.

If you represent someone else's work or material as your own, or if you provide work or material to another student to represent as his or her own, you have cheated. Plagiarism is a specific form of cheating in which you present another's ideas or words as your own. According to the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers, the word plagiarism is from the Latin word plagiarius, which means "kidnapper." Plagiarism is defined as "the false assumption of authorship: the wrongful act of taking the product of another person's mind and presenting it as one's own" (21).

Plagiarism is against the law. It is the student's responsibility to avoid plagiarism in all written and oral assignments.

The best time to think about avoiding plagiarism occurs when you first begin to gather information for your paper. Keep in mind that your teachers expect you to examine and gather the research of others to support your thesis or to make your own observations about a piece of material after you have studied it carefully (Strong and Lester 328).

Keep careful records of all your sources so that you can document them accurately when you prepare a final draft. When you first take notes, make sure that you have the following information for each source that you even think you might use. Then, when it is time for you to prepare your list of works cited page, everything you need will be at your fingertips. There is nothing more frustrating than having notes to use, but no source to document.

GET THE FACTS

In all cases, you will need the following information.

- A. Author's full name (last name first)
- B. Full title (correctly capitalized)
- C. City of publication
- D. Publisher
- E. Year published (most recent date)
- F. Page numbers to locate where you found information

In some cases, you might also need additional information.

- A. Editor
- B. Translator
- C. Edition
- D. Volume number

Accurate documentation of all sources will indicate that you have done your work thoroughly, carefully, and honestly.

DO NOT DOCUMENT EVERYTHING

It is very important to cite the sources you have used for your paper; however, you will be relieved to know that not everything has to be documented. While you must credit others for their work, it is not necessary to cite the source of what is considered to be common knowledge or in the public domain (Strong and Lester 328). For example, all of the following statements are considered common knowledge or in the public domain; none of them needs documentation.

1. A WELL-KNOWN FACT CAN BE CONSIDERED COMMON KNOWLEDGE AND DOES NOT NEED TO BE DOCUMENTED.

The Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776.

2. THE FOLLOWING TWO STATEMENTS REPRESENT INFORMATION THAT IS AVAILABLE IN SEVERAL REFERENCE WORKS.

Completed in 1912, the Titanic was considered the most luxurious ship of its day. The ship sailed out of London and was to reach New York one week later.

3. A FAMOUS PROVERB DOES NOT NEED TO BE DOCUMENTED.

"Don't count your chickens before they are hatched."

4. A WELL-KNOWN QUOTATION DOES NOT NEED TO BE DOCUMENTED.

"Power tends to corrupt and absolute power corrupts absolutely."

5. A SIMPLE DEFINITION DOES NOT NEED TO BE DOCUMENTED.

A library is a collection of books.

DOCUMENT ALMOST EVERYTHING

The following statements need documentation.

1. ANY DIRECT QUOTATION MUST BE CITED.

The sinking of the Titanic "signaled the end of the Edwardian era in all its cocky opulence" (Angier 68).

2. ALWAYS CITE A PARAPHRASE OF ANOTHER AUTHOR'S CONCLUSIONS. SOURCES OF CONCLUSIONS AND OPINIONS OF OTHERS SHOULD ALSO BE CITED.

Americans equated size with security and excess with success (Wade 7).

3. THE PHRASING OF MEASUREMENTS IN THE FOLLOWING WAY WAS THE IDEA AND WORK OF ANOTHER AUTHOR, SO THE SOURCE SHOULD BE CITED.

The Titanic was four city blocks long and eleven stories high (Lord 170).

It takes time and experience to know when to document some types of statements. Until you gain this scholarly "skill," you should ask your teacher for advice.

Now that you have an idea about what should and should not be documented, it is time to consider the method of documentation and the format of your final paper.

PARENTHETICAL DOCUMENTATION

Ramaz requires the use of the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers form, which calls for parenthetical documentation. When you use parenthetical documentation in the body of your paper, you place a short citation in parentheses immediately after the information you wish to document. This citation usually consists of the name of the author you are citing and a page reference. When you are using an edition that has no author, use an abbreviated form of the title of the volume or publication you are citing as your source. The reader of your paper can then look up the complete title of the source in the list of works cited at the end of the paper (Strong and Lester 329).

The citation at the end of the preceding paragraph, (Strong and Lester 329), tells the reader that the information in that paragraph is from a book by two authors named Strong and Lester and that the specific facts cited can be found on page 329 of that book. If the reader wanted to know more about this particular source, he or she could consult the list of works cited page at the end of the paper. On the list of works cited page, in an alphabetical listing by author, a more complete note would appear.

Since you will probably consult many kinds of sources in your research, it is necessary to know how to document each one. The chart on the next page shows, for each type of source, both the parenthetical documentation that would appear in the body of the paper and the entry that would appear on the works cited page at the end of the paper.

THIS CHART SHOWS, FOR EACH TYPE OF SOURCE, THE PARENTHETICAL DOCUMENTATION TO USE IN THE BODY OF THE PAPER AND THE FORM OF THE CORRESPONDING ENTRY IN THE LIST OF WORKS CITED PAGE AT THE END OF THE PAPER.

TYPE OF SOURCE	PARENTHETICAL DOCUMENTATION	ENTRY IN LIST OF WORKS CITED
BOOK WITH ONE AUTHOR A Night to Remember by Walter Lord	(Lord 108)	Lord, Walter. A Night to Remember . New York: Henry Holt, 1955.
BOOK WITH TWO OR THREE AUTHORS Catastrophe and Crisis by Jeremy Kingston and David Lambert	(Kingston and Lambert 295)	Kingston, Jeremy, and David Lambert. Catastrophe and Crisis . New York: Facts on File, 1979.
ENCYCLOPEDIA ARTICLE “ Titanic Disaster ,” an article in the Encyclopaedia Britannica	(“ Titanic Disaster ” 28)	“ Titanic Disaster .” Encyclopedia Britannica . 1969 ed.
MAGAZINE ARTICLE “How We Found the Titanic ” from National Geographic	(Ballard 696-719)	Ballard, Robert D. “How We Found the Titanic .” National Geographic Dec. 1985: 696-719.
NEWSPAPER ARTICLE An article from The New York Times entitled “ Titanic in Peril on Leaving Port”	(“ Titanic in Peril”)	“ Titanic in Peril on Leaving Port.” The New York Times 11 Apr. 12: A1.
TELEVISION OR RADIO PROGRAM “The War We Left Behind,” an episode of Frontline , which appeared on PBS, Oct. 29, 1991	(“War”)	“The War We Left Behind.” Narr. Leslie Cockburn. Prod. Leslie and Andrew Cockburn. Frontline . PBS. WTTW, Chicago, 29 Oct. 1991.
SELECTION IN AN ANTHOLOGY An article by Mrs. H.S. Bishop in an anthology called Eyewitness to History .	(Bishop 436)	Bishop, Mrs. H.S. “The Titanic : From a Lifeboat,” 15 April 1912. Eyewitness to History . Ed. John Carey. Cambridge: Harvard UP, 1987. 436-437.

INCORPORATING QUOTATIONS

When you are composing the body of your paper, you will want to incorporate your source material (information from research sources) into your text (the body of your paper). There are several ways to do this, and varying your methods of incorporation will make your paper interesting and readable.

METHODS OF INCORPORATING QUOTATIONS INTO YOUR PAPER

I. Use the quotation. The first method incorporates the complete quotation into your paper. With this method, there are two possibilities. When the quotation will run more than four typed lines in your paper, you must use a block quotation. Follow these guidelines for a block quotation:

- A. After a completely formed introductory sentence, use a colon to introduce the block quotation.
- B. Begin a new line for the quotation.
- C. Indent one inch (ten spaces if you are using a typewriter) from the left margin.
- D. Type the quotation double-spaced.
- E. Do not add quotation marks; the block style is enough to indicate that you are quoting directly. Reproduce the quotation exactly as it appears in the source.
- F. Follow the quotation with a parenthetical reference to the text.

The following citation comes from a book entitled The Road to Xanadu, written by John Livingston Lowes. In this book, he traces the creative process that inspired many of Samuel Taylor Coleridge's most acclaimed poems. Note how the quotation is introduced by the writer of the paper, as well as how the entire example is punctuated.

In his influential book The Road to Xanadu, John Livingston Lowes minimizes the effect of the revisions on the imaginative pulse of the poem:

For vastly the larger part of "The Ancient Mariner" comes down unchanged from the poem as it first saw light. The great passages of supreme imaginative beauty, whatever throes may have accompanied their composition, have in the main been untouched by the reviser's pen. With rare exceptions, the transformation of the elements that blended in them was from the first complete. (336)

At times, the quotation you cite may contain dialogue. In such a case, there are special conventions to follow when using the block format. The following passage is taken from The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn by Mark Twain. Huck and Jim meet on Jackson's Island, and Huck's speech to Jim is excerpted in the following example:

In The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn by Mark Twain, Huck and Jim meet on Jackson's Island. Huck's commitment to Jim begins at this moment when Huck assures Jim, a runaway slave, that he will never turn him in to the authorities. Jim reminds Huck, "You said you wouldn't tell," to which Huck replies the following:

Well, I did. I said I wouldn't, and I'll stick to it. Honest injun, I will. People would call me a low-down Abolitionist and despise me for keeping mum--but that don't make no difference. I ain't a-going to tell, and I ain't a-going back there, anyways. So, now, le's know all about it. (87)

The cited passage appeared in the original as dialogue punctuated by quotation marks. In block form these quotation marks are unnecessary. Note, in this case as in the previous one, that the parenthetical reference contains only the page number because you have already mentioned the source in your text.

There are times when the quotation that you are using will not run more than four lines. You may decide that you need to use less of the original in order to communicate your idea. In these cases, you do not need to use the block form. Note how the following examples treat this situation.

In his influential book The Road to Xanadu, John Livingston Lowes minimizes the effect of the revisions on the imaginative pulse of the poem: "For vastly the larger part of 'The Ancient Mariner' comes down unchanged from the poem as it first saw light. . . . With rare exceptions, the transformation of the elements that blended in them was from the first complete" (336).

You must use your judgment to decide how much of the original quotation is necessary to support or communicate your idea. Note how the following example treats the case in which the original source has quotation marks of its own.

In The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn by Mark Twain, Huck and Jim meet on Jackson's Island. Huck's commitment to Jim begins at this moment when Huck assures Jim, a runaway slave, that he will never turn him in to the authorities: "Well, I did. I said I wouldn't, and I'll stick to it. Honest injun, I will" (87).

II. Use just a word or phrase from the quotation in your text. Sometimes it may be more effective to use only a word or phrase from the quotation. When you do this, it is important to weave it smoothly into your own writing, as in the following example:

Jim is reluctant to tell Huck his story because he is not sure that Huck can be trusted to keep his secret. Finally, however, Jim confesses all when Huck assures him that even if people call him a "low-down Abolitionist" for helping a slave to escape, he "ain't a-going to tell" (Twain 87).

III. Vary the patterns of the sentences that contain your quotations. When you are composing your own text, try to vary the kinds of sentences you use. As always, you are trying to make your writing interesting and fluid for the reader. Here are some examples of various sentence patterns that contain quotations (Wyrick 269):

1. In his introduction to The Great Gatsby, Professor William Smith points out that "Fitzgerald wrote about himself and produced a narcissistic masterpiece" (5).
2. William Smith, author of Impact, summarized the situation this way: "Eighty-eight percent of the sales force threatens a walkout" (21).
3. "Only the President controls the black box," according to the White House Press Secretary (Smith 129).
4. The drama critic William Smith observed last year in The Saturday Review that the play was "a rousing failure" (212).
5. Perhaps the well-known poet William Smith expressed the idea best when he wrote, "Love is a spider waiting to entangle its victims" (14).
6. Congressman William Smith presented the opposing view when he claimed, "Employment figures are down ten percent from last year" (32).

IV. Paraphrase the quotation in your own words. Sometimes you will want to rewrite a passage from someone else's work in your own words, without using quotation marks at all. This is called paraphrasing. You might do this to simplify the material or to maintain a consistent style in your writing. Below, you will find both an original passage from The Flamingo's Smile by Stephen Jay Gould and a paraphrase of that passage.

ORIGINAL PASSAGE

In most birds (and mammals, including us), the upper jaw fuses to the skull; chewing, biting, and shouting move the mobile lower jaw against this stable brace. If reversed feeding has converted the flamingo's upper jaw into a working lower jaw in size and shape, then we must predict that, contrary to all anatomical custom, this upper beak moves up and down against a rigid lower jaw. The flamingo, in short, should feed by raising and lowering its upper jaw (Gould 85).

PARAPHRASE

Most birds and mammals have rigid, immobile upper jaws and loose, moving lower jaws. This is the situation with humans, for example. The flamingo, however, is a special case. It typically feeds with its head upside down, and its upper jaw looks similar to a lower jaw. Therefore, it would be reasonable to expect the flamingo's upper jaw, since it acts like other animals' lower jaws, to move like other animals' lower jaws (Gould 85).

Notice that the paraphrase is about the same length as the original, that few of the words of the quotation have been used, and that the source is cited in parentheses (Elbow 483).

Here are some guidelines for paraphrasing:

1. Find the stated or implied main idea and express it in your own words.
2. Try to convey the same attitude that the author of the original does.
3. Simplify the wording.

V. Using quotations from poetry in your paper. Quoting part or all of a single line of poetry is similar to incorporating a word or phrase from a prose selection into your text.

A. To quote part or all of a single line of poetry, put it in quotation marks within your text (Gibaldi 74). Note that the parenthetical citation refers to the line number of the quotation, not the page number of the source.

In "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening," Robert Frost sets the scene with the following line: "The woods are lovely, dark, and deep" (13).

In "The Road Not Taken," Robert Frost reflects on the choice he has made and finally concludes that choosing the little-worn path "has made all the difference" (20).

B. To quote two or three lines of poetry, use a slash with a space on each side (/) to separate the lines (Gibaldi 74).

Robert Frost reminds us in "The Road Not Taken" that he made a choice when he took the little-worn path: "I took the one less traveled by, / And that has made all the difference" (19-20).

C. To quote more than three lines of poetry, begin on a new line. Indent each line one inch (or ten spaces on a typewriter) from the left margin and double-space between lines, adding no quotation marks that do not appear in the original. The parenthetical reference should follow the last line of the quotation (Gibaldi 74).

Robert Frost's "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening" seems, on a quick reading, to be a simple account of a man who stops briefly to watch snow falling in the woods. However, the last stanza may reveal a more interesting meaning:

The woods are lovely, dark, and deep,
But I have promises to keep,
And miles to go before I sleep,
And miles to go before I sleep. (13-16)

VI. Using Quotations from Plays in Your Paper. Using quotations from plays follows the method similar to the one described for quoting poetry. In both instances, the parenthetical reference in your text does not include the page number from your primary source. For a play, your source is identified by the title (if the title is not mentioned in your own sentence), followed by Arabic numerals separated by periods to show the standard divisions of the play format. For example, the third scene of the second act would be identified as follows: (2.3). When your source is a drama written in verse, your citations should combine line references and references to act and scene. For the sake of convenience, the following examples refer to verse drama.

A. When your paper concentrates on one work or when your own sentence identifies the play, cite only the act and scene divisions, as well as the line numbers.

In Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra, our sense of the tragedy is heightened as Antony's bleeding body is brought to the monument where he addresses Cleopatra:

I am dying Egypt, dying; only
I here importune death awhile, until
Of many thousand kisses, the poor last
I lay upon thy lips. (4.15.17-20)

B. When your reference cites the play and your reader would not know the identity of the work, be sure you include the title as part of your parenthetical citation.

In Julius Caesar we may compare Portia's admiration of Brutus with Calphurnia's respect for Caesar, but none of these attitudes compares with Cleopatra's love for Antony:

. . . . For his bounty,
There was no winter in't; [an autumn 'twas]
That grew the more by reaping. His delights
Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above
The element they liv'd in. (Ant. 5.2.86-90)

Please keep in mind that, when dealing with prose plays, you will not need to cite line numbers.

VII. Citing Sources from Electronic Media. As the variety of electronic media continues to proliferate, you will probably need to cite a source found on CD-ROM or through the World Wide Web or some other Internet service. Since these media are still relatively new, the citation standards are still evolving. The following chart lists several common electronic sources, according to a citation standard that has already gained acceptance in scholarly circles. As you will notice, all of these citations share a logical order: Author's Last Name, First Name. "Title of Work." Title of Complete Work or Service. [protocol and address] [path] (date of message or visit).

As you study the chart, note that the date of the visit or message appears in parentheses; the information concerning the address or path appears only when meaningful. As always, pay special attention to the method of punctuation used to separate the different components within each citation.

THIS TABLE ILLUSTRATES HOW TO CITE AND DOCUMENT SOURCES FOUND THROUGH DIFFERENT TYPES OF ELECTRONIC MEDIA.

TYPE OF SOURCE	PARENTHEetical DOCUMENTATION	ENTRY IN LIST OF WORKS CITED
MAGAZINE ARTICLE “How We Found the Titanic ” from National Geographic	(Ballard 696-719)	Ballard, Robert D. “How We Found the Titanic .” National Geographic Dec. 1985: 696-719. CD-ROM. NY: National Geographic, 1994.
MAGAZINE ARTICLE “How We Found the Titanic ” from National Geographic Online. America Online	(Ballard 696-719)	Ballard, Robert D. “How We Found the Titanic .” National Geographic Dec. 1985: 696-719. Online. America Online. Titanic Home Page . http://gil.ipswichcity.qld.gov.au/~dalgarra/ (date of your visit).
WWW SITES “A Hypertext History” by Lauren Burka	(Burka)	Burka, Lauren. “A Hypertext History of Multi-User Dimension.” MUD History . http://www.ccs.neu.edu/home/ibp/mud-history.html (date of your visit).
PERSONAL E-MAIL “Regarding Your Question” by Moshe Sofer	(Sofer)	Sofer, Moshe. “Regarding Your Question.” Personal E-mail (date of correspondence).
DISCUSSION LIST MESSAGES “Speaking of the Titanic ” by Robert Ballard	(Ballard)	BALROB[=author’s login name]. “Speaking of the Titanic .” 22 June Online Posting. Discussions on All Forms of Disasters. Available E-mail: DISASTER-L@annapolis.edu (the date of your access).
FTP SITES “Approaches to Managing Deviant Behavior” by Amy Brockman	(Brockman)	Brockman, Amy. “Approaches to Managing Deviant Behavior in Virtual Communities.” ftp.media.mit.edu/pub/asb/papers/deviance-chi94 (4 Dec. 1994).

VIII. Citing Jewish Sources: When your research includes primary and secondary sources written in Hebrew, you should treat your citations according to the same guidelines that you have followed in your research in English.

A. When citing original Hebrew sources, Ramaz prefers that you use the original title of the work rather than its English translation, unless you think your reader will be unfamiliar with the reference. Hence, Bereishit is to be preferred instead of Genesis, Iyov instead of Job, and Tehillim instead of Psalms.

B. When using a translation, you should cite which English edition of Tanakh or the Talmud you are using in the list of works cited page at the end of your paper. Otherwise, it will be assumed that you translated the source yourself.

C. When citing a translation that appears in a secondary source, you must cite the author of the secondary source rather than simply the source that is being translated. For example, if J.D. Bleich quotes a verse in English from Devarim, then you must make note of the fact that the translation comes from Bleich and not from a translation: “As it says in the book of Devarim 5:16, ‘Honor your father and your mother’” (Bleich 67).

D. When citing the Talmud, it can be assumed that you are citing works from the Talmud Bavli. As such, you need only write Shabbat rather than Talmud Bavli, Shabbat. However, when you are quoting the Yerushalmi, then you must indicate so by writing, Talmud Yerushalmi (or Jerusalem Talmud), Shabbat.

E. The traditional way to cite a page from the Talmud is Berakhot 11a or 11b in place of ברכות דף יא עמוד א' או עמוד ב'.

F. Pages, chapter, paragraphs or other numerical reference numbers that usually appear in letters of the Hebrew alphabet should be translated into Arabic numerals. You can usually assume that the reader is familiar enough with the work to know what the number refers to. Hence, ט' רמבם, משנה תורה, הלכות שבת, פרק ל' הלכה may be cited as R. Moshe ben Maimon, Mishneh Torah, Hilkhot Shabbat 30:9. Similarly, שלחן ערוך, אורח חיים, הלכות שבת, פרק רסב, סעיף ב' may be cited as Shulchan Arukh, OH 262:2.

G. Transliteration. The following are the most acceptable ways to transliterate some of the more confusing Hebrew letters:

א— a' as in ישראל = Yisra'el

ה— h, as in ילדה = yaldah

ח— ch, as in שלחן = shulchan

כ— kh, as in ערוך = arukh

כ— k, as in חנוכה = chanukah

ע— a', as in דעת = da'at

צ— tz, as in צדקה = tzedakah

PREPARING THE FINAL DRAFT

You have put in a great deal of time and effort. You have narrowed your topic, conducted your research, taken copious notes, and outlined your ideas; you are ready to prepare your final copy. Your paper deserves a polished presentation. Observing the following format will reflect your effort and make your paper neat and readable (Morgan 214).

Ramaz requires the use of the MLA Handbook, which reflects recent changes in format and style and has been adopted in most high schools and colleges (Morgan 215). The following recommendations are the most common (Gibaldi 107-109).

1. Use standard 8 ½ X 11 inch white paper. Do not use erasable paper. Use only one side of the paper.
2. If you must handwrite a paper, use blue or black ink; skip lines and write legibly.
3. Make certain that your typewriter or printer ribbon is in good condition. If you are using a laser printer or ink jet, make sure the toner level is full. Use a font with a point size that is formal and easy to read.
4. Leave a one inch margin around each page (except for the page number; see number nine below).
5. Double-space throughout the paper—including the heading, quotations, notes, and list of works cited.
6. Do not use a title page. The heading on the first page (upper left corner beginning at one inch margin from the top) consists of the following (double-spaced):

Student's Name

Teacher's Name

Course Number

Date

7. After the heading, double-space again and center your title. If the title is more than one line, continue to double-space. Do not underline your title. Do not put your title in quotation marks. Do not type your title in all capital letters.
8. Double-space between the line(s) of the title and the first line of the text.
9. Number all pages consecutively throughout the paper in the upper right-hand corner, one-half inch from the top. Type your last name before the page number, Weinstein 1.
10. Justify only the left margin; do not justify the right margin.
11. At the beginning of each paragraph, indent five spaces. If you are handwriting, indent approximately one inch from the left margin.
12. Keep in mind the following spacing conventions: one space after a comma and semicolon; two spaces after a period, exclamation mark, question mark or colon.
13. When citing the titles of works, remember the following rules: (1) Underline the title of a book or any work published independently; (2) use quotation marks for titles of works published within larger works.
14. Avoid contractions in formal writing.
15. In formal writing, avoid abbreviations. See the MLA Handbook for exceptions, such as Dr. and Mrs.
16. In formal writing, avoid the “you” viewpoint. It is awkward to maintain and encourages irrational shifts between second and third person.
17. In formal, expository writing, avoid the “I” viewpoint; it is appropriate in rare instances, but should be used sparingly.
18. When writing about literature, use the present tense when discussing the plot. During the course of your essay, depending on the context of your discussion, it may be necessary to shift tenses to introduce certain quotations or to reflect different time schemes within your recounting of the plot. You must develop a feel for this stylistically complex convention. Remember, there must always be a valid reason for shifting tenses within your essay.
19. While a comma or a period, in general, appears inside the closing quotation mark, in certain parenthetical citations the comma or period should follow the parenthetical page reference. See the examples presented in this style book.

20. In general, write as words all whole numbers from one to nine and use numerals for all numbers 10 and over. Here are some common exceptions: (1) never begin a sentence with a numeral; (2) use a numeral together with a symbol or abbreviation; (3) for large numbers, use a numeral-word combination.
21. Underline or italicize foreign words.
22. Secure the pages of your paper with a paper clip or a staple. Most teachers find plastic folders, binders, or pins annoying since they are bothersome to remove and replace.
23. If you have any questions, ask your teacher.
24. Be sure to keep a copy of your paper for yourself.

PREPARING A WORKS CITED PAGE

Use the following guidelines to prepare your list of works cited page. The list of works cited page at the end of this paper can be used as an example.

1. The list of works cited appears at the end of the paper.
2. Begin the list on a new page.
3. Number each page of the list of works cited, continuing the page numbers of your paper.
4. Type the page numbers in the upper right-hand corner, one-half inch from the top of the page.
5. Center the title "Works Cited" one inch from the top of the page.
6. Double-space between the title and the first entry.
7. Begin each entry flush with the left margin. If the entry runs more than one line, indent the following line(s) five spaces from the left margin. Arrange the entries in alphabetical order according to the author's last name.
8. Double-space the entire list, both between and within entries.
9. Continue the list on as many pages as necessary.
10. Although many word-processing programs and computer printers make it possible to reproduce italic type, in work that will be graded, you should underline titles of books, plays, pamphlets, and periodicals. For a complete list of titles to be underlined, see the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers, Fourth Edition, Section 2.6.2.

Works Cited

Angier, Natalie. "After 73 Years, A Titanic Find." Time 16 September 1985: 68.

Elbow, Peter, and Sheridan Blau. The Writer's Craft: Idea to Expression.

Evanston: McDougal Littell, 1992.

Frost, Robert. "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening." Sound and Sense. 7th ed. Ed.

Laurence Perrine. New York: Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 1987. 131.

---. "The Road Not Taken." Sound and Sense. 7th ed. Ed. Laurence Perrine. New York:

Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 1987. 78.

Gibaldi, Joseph. MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers. 4th ed. New York: MLA, 1995.

Lowes, John Livingston. The Road to Xanadu: A Study in the Ways of the Imagination.

New York: Houghton Mifflin, 1927.

Mann, Rebecca C., and Pete M. Mann. Essay Writing: Methods and Models.

Belmont: Wadsworth Publishing, 1990.

Morgan, William P. Write to the Point! Principles of Essay Writing.

Lincolnwood: National Textbook, 1991.

Shakespeare, William. Complete Plays and Poems. Ed. W. A. Nielson and C. J. Hill.

Cambridge: Houghton and Mifflin Company, 1942.

Strong, William, and Mark Lester. Writer's Choice: Book 10. Mission Hills: Glencoe, 1993.

Twain, Mark. The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn. New York: Amsco School Publications, n.d.

Cohen 25

Wade, Wyn Craig. The Titanic--End of a Dream. New York: Rawson, Wade, 1979.

Walker, Janice R. "MLA-Style Citations of Electronic Sources." Alliance for Computers and Writing <http://www.schdist81.bc.ca/~LRC/RCHome.html>
(5 Dec 1995).

Wyrick, Jean. Steps to Writing Well. Fort Worth: Holt, 1990.

First Page of a Research Paper

8 1/2"

Double-space

Josephson 1

1"

1"

Laura N. Josephson
Professor Bennett
Humanities 2710
8 May 1993

Ellington's Adventures in Music and Geography

In studying the influence of Latin American, African, and Asian music on modern American composers, music historians tend to discuss such figures as Aaron Copland, George Gershwin, Henry Cowell, Alan Hovhaness, and John Cage (Brindle: Griffiths 104-39; Hitchcock 173-98). They usually overlook Duke Ellington, whom Gunther Schuller rightly calls "one of America's great composers" (318), probably because they are familiar only with Ellington's popular pieces, like "Sophisticated Lady," "Mood Indigo," and "Solitude." Still little known are the many ambitious orchestral suites Ellington composed, several of which, such as Black, Brown, and Beige (originally entitled The African Suite), The Liberian Suite, The Far East Suite, The Latin American Suite, and Afro-Eurasian Eclipse, explore his impressions of the people, places, and music of other countries.

Not all music critics, however, have ignored Ellington's excursions into longer musical forms. In the 1950s, for example, while Ellington was still alive, Raymond Horricks compared him with Ravel, Debuss, and Debussy:

The continually enquiring mind of Ellington . . . has sought to extend steadily the imaginative boundaries of the musical form on which it subsists. . . . Ellington since the mid-1930s has been engaged upon extending both the imagery and the formal construction of written jazz. (127-23)

Ellington's earliest attempts to move beyond the three-minute limit

11"

First Page of a List of Works Cited

8 1/2"

Double-space

Josephson 15

1"

1"

Works Cited

Brindle, Reginald Smith. "The Search Outwards: The Orient, Jazz, Archaisms." The New Music: The Avant-Garde since 1945. New York: Oxford UP, 1975. 133-45.

Burnett, James. "Ellington's Place as a Composer." Gammond 141-55.

Ellington, Duke. Afro-Eurasian Eclipse. 1971. Fantasy, 1991.

... Black, Brown, and Beige. 1945. RCA Bluebird, 1988.

... The Far East Suite. LP. RCA, 1965.

... The Latin American Suite. 1969. Fantasy, 1990.

... The Liberian Suite. LP. Philips, 1947.

... Music Is My Mistress. 1973. New York: Da Capo, 1976.

Gammond, Peter, ed. Duke Ellington: His Life and Music. 1958. New York: Da Capo, 1977.

Griffiths, Paul. A Concise History of Avant-Garde Music: From Debussy to Boulez. New York: Oxford UP, 1978.

Hesse, John Edward. Beyond Category: The Life and Genius of Duke Ellington. Pvd. Winton Marshall. New York: Simon, 1993.

Hitchcock, H. Wiley. Music in the United States: An Introduction. 2nd ed. Englewood Cliffs: Prentice, 1974.

Horricks, Raymond. "The Orchestral Suites." Gammond 127-31.

Rattenbury, Ken. Duke Ellington, Jazz Composer. New Haven: Yale UP, 1990.

Schuller, Gunther. Early Jazz: Its Roots and Musical Development. New York: Oxford UP, 1968.

Southern, Eileen. The Music of Black Americans: A History. 2nd ed. New York: Norton, 1983.

Tucker, Mark, ed. The Duke Ellington Reader. New York: Oxford UP, 1993.

... Ellington: The Early Years. Urbana: U of Illinois P, 1991.

11"